Vancouver Mayor Charles Grain Commissioner With Misleading Statements

Industries in Britain

VANCOUVER, B.C., March 30.—With stenographic transcripts of proceedings at the recent conference of the Western Canada Unity and Development League, the mayors and reeves of the leading cities and municipalities of Alberta and British Columbia, as his guide, Mayor Louis D. Taylor, of Vancouver, and Commissioner James Robinson of the Dominion Grain Board is giving the press of Eastern Canada decidedly misleading and incorrect statements of the proceedings of the conference.

laid upon the amendment as it was in the right direction, and believe that ultimately the board would come to the same conclusion. British Columbia will decide just what industries will be covered by the bill, and come under the provisions of the eight-hour day.

Although the amendment finally carried was not without opposition, Mr. C. Marshall, the Labour leader, holding that if this was the intention of the conference, an investigation this bill need not necessarily be undertaken.

"We are passing a bill and then making inquiries afterwards. The question is, will there be any difference in the bill if they will make no difference in the bill?" he pointed out.

Explained

Hon. Alex Ross, minister of labour, stated that under the act an inspection would be made of all industries to work over the eight-hour day, and that the board would be given power to determine for any reason, and that the board would have the power to make any provision of looking into the desirability of establishing an eight-hour day.

H. C. Marshall, of Calgary, wanted to know if the board would be the body whom the board would be appointed to the eight-hour day.

"There is no committee of the employees, or the third man, to be appointed by the board," said Mr. Ross.

"It is the result of a motion of the conference that the third man, should be appointed by the board," said Mr. Marshall.

Mr. H. C. Marshall expressed the opinion that the commission as named in the act would be a temporary committee of adjustment, and that the British Columbia act, or a board of arbitration, would be appointed.

Mr. Marshall, although he admitted can-didly that the bill was not intended to get an eight-hour act in force, said: "I am not in favour of the bill, but I am in favour of the men who went into the bill through their own efforts."

He wanted some appeal from an industry to work overtime, and then, after a discussion, he said: "There was an appeal from an industry to take up the matter, who would in turn take up the matter up with their colleagues."

Eight-Hour Day

The bill did not pass through committee, and was referred back under advisement the requests of various labour members and the industrial branch, excepted from the provisions of the act.

These included garages in small towns, and the shipyards, lumber, sawmills, boat building plants, grain elevators, flour mills, flour and cracker mills, salt drying works and similar industries peculiar to northern points, where the hours of work were seasonal and where it is considered necessary to work long hours in the summer season.

SHOT FOLLOWED BLOW, KILLING WITNESS SAYS

Nolan Told to Be Quiet or He Would Be Fired With Lead

Entrance to Bulletin

CALGARY, March 30.—Jack Connor, president of the U.M.W.A., emphatically denied that the heavy-weight boxer and organizer of the miners' union, had been brought to "roughing it" for the miners union, when he was shot in the head by Justice Boyle and fury inspiring into the police station, where he was shot by Constable Morrison, at the police station, after the boxer had been taken to the hospital.

Indeed, with the boxer, who was quite composure, Connor said, "O.K. G.O.D. that the evidence before the coroner's inquest showed he was brought out of the preliminary hearing by the police, and that he was in the police station when he was told to 'blow full of lead.' Nolan assured.

Percy Wheeler, friend of Nolan, said that the boxer, when he was last seen, was in the police station, after being told to keep quiet, and he was told "blow full of lead." Nolan stressed.

that indicates in this section of the country he exempt from the bill.

George Mills of Athabasca asked for boats from the industrial section, pointing out that in the beginning they wanted to build boats, and then they decided to build boats, and now they have a dozen.

"The shipping plants on the Columbia River are not in the section where the bill would be unfair competition," he said.

A little later Mr. Hoadley wanted exemption for the same reason.

"What do you want anyhow? We are not going to stand around and do nothing," he said.

"I am going to stand around," protested L. A. Groulx of Coaldale. "We are not going to stand around in the rest of the province."

"Well you don't stand about the house," he retorted.

All he is doing is trapping, boat-building, and so on, he said.

"I am going to stand around the Chetwynd, who are the leaders of the 'pioneers of the north,'" he said.

"The better go and see some more men, and come back strong."

"I don't have to go there. That's one place I won't go to," he said.

He has gathered a lot of information, and he doesn't know what to do with it," he concluded.

Not Ordering Any Plebiscite.

By an overwhelming vote, in which party lines did not count, the Legislature refused to grant a plebiscite on the question of abolishing the beer parlor.

That was hardly surprising. The Legislature took upon itself, under direction of the Government, to establish beer parlors, after going through the motions of holding a plebiscite at which the issue was obscurely stated and very doubtfully understood.

Should another plebiscite be taken, and the beer parlor policy fail of approval, the result would be somewhat in the nature of a popular vote of want of confidence in the ministry and the members who followed its lead. Discretion in such circumstances is considerably the better part of valor.

As for the issue itself—aside from the absurd position in which the Government and its followers have landed themselves—the referendum is still part of the law of the Province. If the prescribed percentage of the voters ask for a plebiscite, there will be one.

In providing this automatic device by which a vote can be brought on, the Legislature also provided itself with a convenient argument that it is no longer the arbiter in such matters. Having absolved itself from responsibility in that connection, the ministers can hardly be blamed for refusing to order a plebiscite on anything unless it is asked for in the way by law ordained.

The Basis of Taxation.

The Provincial property tax, which figures in the status book under the meaningless title of Supplementary Revenue tax, will not be repealed. The Government said so, and the dominant party in the Legislature promptly killed the proposal.

Premier Browne explained why the tax is to be continued. If it were abolished, the Government would have a deficit of a million dollars at the end of the current year.

What it means is that the Ministers do not propose to spend less than they are spending. Instead, they say, "We'll take the cloth" that can be reasonably afforded; they have decided what size the garment is to be, and the public must supply the cloth necessary.

Instead of expenditure being governed by revenue, taxation is now governed by the ministerial discretion to spend. Taxes will be heavier or reduced if the public would leave the Minister less money to dispose of.

What it means is that from what that prospect there is of a reduction in Provincial taxation.

If the present rate of the provincial property tax is justified because the Government has foreseen a need, however small, to spend more, then rate two or three times as high would be equally justified on the same ground. The rate is now one mill. It may be two or three mills next year or the year after, if the Ministers should decide to spend with a free hand.

Lower Rates; More Revenue.

The income tax is no exception to the rule that tax rates may be made so high that they shut off revenue from the public treasury. There is a limit beyond which increasing the rate does not increase revenue.

New Zealand in 1921 had a schedule of high income tax rates. The revenue for 1922 showed a decrease of 27 per cent, and that of the following year of 36 per cent. more. As a remedy the rates were reduced in 1924 by 20 per cent; and the shrinkage of revenue dropped to 2 per cent. A similar reduction in 1925, when the same rates were made last year, and it is expected that the return will show no further falling off in revenue.

In the United States, income tax rates were at the peak in 1918. The report of the Chamber of Commerce for last year states that they have fallen by an increase in the proceeds. Regarding the cut in rates made in 1924, it is said that the revenue for 1925 will be found to have been larger than that for 1923.

A reduction in taxation was promised in the speech of Mr. Thorne at the opening of Parliament. It is expected that this will take the form of a reduction in the income tax rates. The immediate object is to lighten the burden of taxation on the individual. But it will likely be found that the change will also increase the revenue from the taxation of the rich, as the experience of other countries is a reliable indicator.

Canada is still maintaining income tax rates as the maximum. On small incomes these are said to be from three to five times as heavy as those collected in the United States last year. That undoubtedly helps to explain the backward trek of capital from Canada to the United States. Capital that was once prosperous in Canada as in the United States. And the better times are on the other side of the line the greater must be the explosive effect of high taxation on this side.

The time has come, in my opinion, and almost only has arrived as an emergency expedient.

Taxation, where possible, should be on spending, not on earning. To tax earning is to discourage enterprise and industry. To tax spending is to discourage extravagance. Income taxation will doubtless be used for years to come as a means of raising revenue. But a steady, gradual, constant reduction in the rates will help to create more incomes to be taxed; and from a reduced demand upon a greater number of pockets the Government will probably draw more, not less, revenue.

UNDERSTANDING

Last night I heard a baby sing.
A classic, simple old song.
Her voice, it did as clearly ring
As though her throat were golden.

She thrilled as only song birds can.
She sang with all the strength she can.
Said I unto my neighbor man,
"No word I hear her utter."

"It's I, I."
I thought, "How bright she ought to be.
That song is very lovely, yet,
I'd like the truth about it."

He whispered low, "The lady pale,
A classic, simple old song.
The song is of a nightingale,
Whose passion for a rose."

"The bird pours out his love in song,
With all the strength he can.
For she has lived a sweet long life
And plans with him to marry."

"The sorrow-stricken nightingale,
A classic, simple old song.
And died in the rose, the little late,
In one great burst of singing."

Then seeing what from me was his
I strangely learned to love it.
And when he left me, I did
Caught the beauty of it.

Thought I, perhaps in after years,
We'll find our doubts are reason.
And when I hear her sing again,
When we have learned the reason."

Though sorrow fills us with despair,
And life is never without it.
We'll find our doubts are reason
When we know more about it."

DRESS AND LOOK SLENDER

A book has come to me entitled "Dress and Look Slender," by Jane Warren Walls. It is from the Standard Publishing Company, Cincinnati, Pennsylvania, and suspect that Walls is the pen-name for someone connected with that institution.

Fat is the curse of most people; it is the thing that all the world over seems to abhor. This book gives some very good suggestions on how to appear thin.

It is all a matter of lines apparently. Long straight lines make you look tall and slender; short, crooked lines make you look fat and dumpy. Dresses therefore have parallel vertical lines to be seen for a fleshly person.

There are six books that can be obtained in those which are well worth the price. They depend on optical illusion. A slender woman may actually appear thinner by failing to dress in accordance with these lines, and a stout woman can appear slender.

Winnipeg despatches—

A number of Liberals voted with the Government in the House of Commons yesterday in the election of Riel.

An election took place in the Manitoba legislature over the Hudson Bay railway question. An amendment was moved by Narusay explaining that his constituents had voted for the construction of the road. It carried.

The Canadian election, when approaching New York on Friday last evening, was won by a schooner and sank immediately. All the freight and passengers were saved.

The steamer "Raven" was lost the day before. The man was a discharged soldier, and was found the following day, were lost, but no live.

Queen Victoria attended the laying of the cornerstone of the new examination hall of the college of St. John's University, New York, on Saturday. Some excitement was caused by the action of a man who forced his way through the crowd and attempted to speak to the Queen.

Bid of $2,500 for Laundry
Site Turned Down by City

The first quarterly instalment of 1926 taxes will not become payable until May 1, council has decided, after a long discussion of time Monday night. Estimates were passed early this year and when the mill rate was struck at 40-1-3 the plan was to have the first payment of April 1, but the equipment committee delayed the notices two weeks and the city solicitor has reported that an additional fortnight may be given so that legal notice may be seen.

The offer of the gas company to supply the power house with propane gas was turned down Monday night because the price quoted was $1,025 per month, which would be a saving of $2,415 on coal. The gas company had offered to supply the superintendent for a year, but the city solicitor said that the cost of the gas, which he says, would require regular costing $12,416, plus labor $9,200, was too high. The gas company's usage of only $1,014. It is stated that the gas company has no right to demand payment of its bills and has a chance to explain its claim of $12,416 made for the city, which was never paid.

Price Tax Law
On behalf of the Farmers' Wearing & Net, who propose to erect a laundry and dry goods store on 102nd Street, O. H. Vain Allens made an offer to the city to supply the northeast corner of Jasper and 111th street, which is priced at $5,000 by the city solicitor. The offer was not accepted by the city, but the new company has agreed to make such a drastic reduction in its rates as will be of benefit to the city.
